THE JOLLY JAIL BIRD /

It is the "Dyed In The Wool" ambition of every prisoner to make a clean cut escape as soon as he can. And little Charley Dog Face was there with "Stripes on". In short order he caught the guards asleep, as is often the case, and Charley goes "right over the fence and out."

Freight trains are always handy things and when they stop they are handier. Charley rigs up a hammock under a car and is right at home.

Charley steps off and soon encounters a weenie merchant, a short dance and a few tricks amuse the merchant so much that Charley is soon able to adopt most of his weenies.

Charley soon attracts the attention of officer Pup. A chase begins. Charley leads the cop over a cliff and is enjoying a good laugh at the cop when a bomb explodes under him, which raises him up in the air and when he lands he is all dressed in stripes again doing his stuff in jail. Which proves---that, "A lot of rocks make a firm foundation."
